PPM PREVIEW DAY 06/08/2012

MISSION

Keck Graduate Institute is dedicated to education and research aimed at translating into practice, for the benefit of society, the power and potential of the life sciences.

CULTURE

KGI seeks to sustain an interdisciplinary and entrepreneurial culture, working in partnership with industry to develop leaders for the biosciences, while promoting academic freedom and the highest ethical standards.

CORE VALUES

Entrepreneurial and Reflective
Ethical and Responsible
Collaborative and Independent
Interdisciplinary and Applied

According to NSF statistics, the number of PhD graduates and postdocs is steadily increasing. However, over the last decades, the number of academic faculty positions has stagnated and the average age for scientists receiving their first R01 NIH grant is now 42 (NIH 2011).

For many postdocs, industry offers a promising alternative. Careers in industry can be both exciting and rewarding, offering real world application of cutting edge science and making a beneficial impact upon people's lives.

To help scientists and engineers create commercial career pathways, KGI launched a Postdoctoral Professional Masters in Bioscience Management (PPM) designed for Ph.D. graduates with backgrounds in science and engineering and for M.D. graduates. The fully accredited master's degree helps postdocs acquire the business and management skills they need to pursue senior positions with life science companies or embark on entrepreneurial ventures to commercialize technologies developed in laboratories.

Human Resources Consultant;

Former Senior Vice President of Human Resources, Genentech Inc.

"WHAT DO EMPLOYERS WANT?

CAREER GUIDANCE FOR SCIENTISTS LOOKING TO WORK IN INDUSTRY"

What skills do you need to enter the corporate workforce? Why isn't a PhD sufficient, especially to work for companies where science is the fundamental currency of the business? The answers to these questions are complex and require a detailed understanding of how the corporate world operates, and how it is fundamentally different from the academy. Judy Heyboer, a leading expert on human resources within the biotechnology industry, will discuss how work is organized within the corporate world and provide guidance that can help scientists successfully make the transition from academic to commercial careers.

SPEAKER BIOGRAPHY:

Judy Heyboer has spent the last twenty-seven years in Human Resources, retiring from full-time corporate life in 2000 as Senior Vice President at Genentech, Inc. in South San Francisco, CA. At Genentech, Judy revamped and re-energized the Human Resources function, and managed the introduction of the entire span of new programs following the company's public offering in 1999. During her tenure, Genentech achieved its initial recognition by Fortune Magazine as one of America's, "100 Best Places to Work". Prior to Genentech, Judy spent thirteen years at Acuson Corporation, which she joined in the startup phase to create the HR function and develop the culture and "feel" of the company. She began her human resources career at Spectra-Physics, Inc. where she spent in-depth time in each of the classic HR functions. In addition to her consulting work in human resources, Judy devotes a substantial portion of her time and energy to writing, mentoring, advisory work, and making a difference in the community. She continues to be actively engaged in the human resource community, serving as consultant, mentor, speaker, and executive coach.

Judy has an MBS from Santa Clara University, and BA and MA degrees from the University of Michigan. In 2007, Judy's accomplishments were recognized by induction into the San Mateo County Women's Hall of Fame. She currently serves as trustee of the Keck Graduate Institute and also serves on the boards of The Health Trust, Friends for Youth, Resource Area for Teaching, and the Advisory Board of Facing History and Ourselves. She is a Senior Fellow of the American Leadership Forum.
