

THE CLAREMONT COLLEGES

CORONAVIRUS SITUATION UPDATE

February 28, 2020

The health and safety of our students, faculty and staff are of the utmost concern to The Claremont Colleges (TCC). From the first emergence of this new illness in January, we have focused attention on preparedness and have assembled decision making groups of college representatives to monitor, plan, and respond over our campuses. Emergency management representatives from all seven (7) Claremont Colleges and The Claremont Colleges Services are meeting regularly to discuss and prepare contingency plans for minimizing any effects of the Coronavirus. The emergency managers are closely monitoring the outbreak and creating response plans to address this evolving situation, from standard virus control procedures (currently in place for the very few cases in the United States) as well as what to do in the event of a full-blown pandemic.

The Claremont Colleges Services (TCCS) is following the directives provided by the Center for Disease Control (CDC) and the Los Angeles County Department of Public Health (LA DPH). Additionally, TCCS staff has participated in several telebriefings provided by LA DPH. TCCS has taken the lead on following, developing and disseminating communications materials with our institutions including health advisories, FAQs, social media graphics and Health Education Outreach.

The Student Health Services website (<https://services.claremont.edu/student-health-services/>) is TCC's centralized source for the latest information from the most authoritative, reliable sources. This is a remarkably human situation, and our first priority is to put people first: the students, faculty, staff, and the communities we serve. For more specific details on your student's campus preparations and planning, please contact your college's Student Dean.
